UTM: 18.4353710.260160
Quad: Charles Town, West Virginia

Significance: The Office is a partially intact example of vernacular design and the only non-residential building with decorative features at the Standard Quarry site.

Description: The Office is a one-story, brick-faced, three-bay building constructed of hollow tile masonry. There is a stylized parapet on the facade (east) and a small porch with a bracketed shed roof. The front door has a transom over it, and all windows are capped with flat arches. The roof is shed with a hip-shaped skylight monitor. Inside there are five to six rooms, lath and plaster ceilings and walls, and decorative baseboard, window, and door surrounds. The Office is roughly 35 feet square and has been partially demolished. All windows units have been broken.

History: Built c. 1920-1930, the Office was the center of managerial and administrative affairs at the Standard Quarry site.
